The potatoes and apples should not be allowed to freeze, call out the rotten ones and save the rest.

Lets not begin to coddle our hens with the first whiff of frosty weather. That softens them and makes them tender for the real cold that is coming.

A tank heater for heating drinking water for live stock will pay for itself, and again, in one winter, in the saving of extra feed required to restore the animal lost by taking in drafts of icy water.

Formerly it was supposed the apples ought to sweat before they are stored, but investigations indicate that any ripening which takes place between the picking time and the storage house is injurious to the keeping qualities of the fruit.

American breeds, of which Plymouth Rocks and Rhode Island Reds are types, are excellent chickens for farmers to keep. They are reasonably good layers, and by careful selection can be made to lay extra well. When it comes to cooking or selling one of these fowls, they have the weight that counts. All are good sitters and mothers.

The soil of a farm may be relatively rich or poor, but making the soil richer is the legitimate business of every farmer. The soil must be studied and understood. Every reasonable possible means should be taken to deepen and enrich the soil every year. It is handled. Practical farmers and experiment station experts are showing us how to do this. Every farmer with good soil in his making should be a soil expert in a class by himself. He can be.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Questions for Voters to Consider Before Election.

We hear more or less about the various candidates who are before the people for their suffrage at the coming election, but as yet no one says anything about three amendments to the constitution which will be referred to the people for a yes and no vote and each of all of these amendments are of importance, and a yes and no vote throughout the state will decide their fate.

FIRST RESOLVE, CHAPTER 21.

RESOLVES TO PROVIDE FOR SUBMITTING TO THE PEOPLE THE ARTICLE OF AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION DISQUALIFYING FROM VOTING PERSONS CONVICTED OF CERTAIN OFFENSES.

Article three of the amendments to the constitution is hereby amended by inserting after the word "guardianship" in line two, the following:—and persons temporarily or permanently disqualified by law because of corrupt practices in respect to elections.

SECOND RESOLVE, CHAPTER 115.

RESOLVES TO PROVIDE FOR SUBMITTING TO THE PEOPLE THE ARTICLE OF AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION RELATIVE TO THE TAXATION OF WILD OR FOREST LANDS.

Full power and authority are hereby given and granted to the general court to prescribe for wild or forest lands such methods of taxation as will develop and conserve the forest resources of the commonwealth.

CHAPTER 303.

AN ACT RELATIVE TO PENSIONING LABORERS IN THE EMPLOY OF CITIES AND TOWNS.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

Section 1. Any laborer in the employ of a city or town which accepts this act, who has reached the age of sixty years and has been in such employ for a period of not less than twenty-five years and has become physically or mentally incapacitated by reason of any injury received in the performance of his duties for such city or town, may, at his request, and in cities, with the approval of the mayor, or in towns, with the approval of the selectmen, be retired from service, and shall receive from the city or town an annual pension computed in the manner hereinafter set forth.

Section 2. This act shall be submitted to the voters of each of the cities and towns of the commonwealth at the next annual state election for their acceptance or rejection, and shall take effect in any city or town upon its acceptance by a majority of the voters of such city or town voting thereon.

Section 3. Not less than two weeks and not more than four weeks before the election at which this act shall be submitted to the voters, the clerk of each city or town shall cause to be mailed to each of the registered voters in his city a copy of this act, together with a statement that it is to be submitted to the voters at the coming election.

Section 4. This act shall not apply to the city of Boston.

(The foregoing was laid before the Governor on the eleventh day of April, 1912, and after five days it had "the force of a law," as prescribed by the Constitution, as it was not returned by him with his objections thereto within that time.)

AND TRANSCRIPT

FRIDAY, NOV. 1, 1912.

We reproduce this week the three amendments to the constitution on which the people are asked to express their opinion next Tuesday. Study them carefully, especially the third one, and weigh the result.

If you are a voter, new or old, vote the whole ticket next Tuesday. It is just as important to have good, sound men in the legislature of Massachusetts as it is to have them in the House of Congress or even at the White House.

Next Tuesday will be election day and polls will be open in the several precincts at 8 A. M. and will close at 5 P. M. The polls will close at 1 P. M. but do not wait until then. Vote early if you wish. The election day is the 1st of November, and the polls will be open from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M.

Registration closed last Saturday night at the office of the registrars with an average of new men seeking the right to become American citizens in all that the word "citizenship" signifies, and when the books were closed, Weymouth had more names on the list of voters than ever before in its history, the grand total being more than 5,000.

One of the most important issues which is before the republicans voters of Massachusetts at the coming election is the legislature of our own state. The incoming legislature will be called upon to elect a successor to Mr. Murray Chase as United States senator.

This election will be made by a joint session at the state house, and the legislature and in the legislature of 1912 there was a margin of but 25 in favor of the republicans, consequently the party can ill afford to trifling with the ballot for members of the legislature if it wishes to sustain the reputation of the state as established by Sumner, Wilson, Duffell, and other noble men who have been an honor to the Old Bay State.

Old Colony Club.

A meeting of the Old Colony Club was held in the Union church, South Weymouth, Thursday afternoon, October 24. The occasion was a "dinner and a talk" by Mr. Herbert J. Quincy, clerk of the State Federation, and a very clever original poem entitled "The Potent Term." Several musical selections were rendered in a most pleasing way by the Cora Goodrich Brooks Trio, and the meeting to the members and their guests adjourned to the church vestry, where a reception was given to Mrs. Mulligan who was assisted by Mrs. Frederic G. Bauer, president of the Old Colony club, Mrs. Quincy and Mrs. Poole. A tea was served under the direction of Mrs. Thomas V. Nash who was hostess for the afternoon.

At the next meeting of the club which will occur November 14, Mrs. Mildred Madlock will speak on "What to Eat and Why," and Mrs. Jennie B. Worster will give reminiscences of the Biennial. Tickets and reserved seats will be on sale for the club drama, "The Importance of Being Earnest," which will be presented in Fogg's Opera House on November 21.

Clarence E. Orcutt Burial.

Briefly last week we mentioned the passing away of Clarence E. Orcutt of East Weymouth. Mr. Orcutt was a native of East Weymouth and it has always been his home and a genial disposition has always surrounded him with a host of friends and acquaintances. The Weymouth Fire Department was indebted to him for much valuable service and assistance as a deputy fireman for many years.

Funeral services were held at his late home on Friday last and were conducted by Rev. Dr. Geo. A. Grant of the M. E. church. The burial was in the family lot at Fairmount cemetery to which place the remains were escorted by the East Weymouth Veterans' Association.

The pall bearers were Harry Faulkner, Joseph Sherman, James Hannaford, Emil Peterson, T. W. Johnson and Edson Ewell.

Mrs. Catherine O'Brien.

Mrs. Catherine O'Brien, who died suddenly last Sunday morning at her home on Pleasant street, East Weymouth, was born in the immaculate Conception church in East Weymouth on Wednesday morning, June 14, 1854. Her husband, John O'Brien, died in 1894. She was a devoted mother and a very kind and generous person. She was a member of the Conception church and was very active in its work. She was a very kind and generous person. She was a member of the Conception church and was very active in its work.

Frank O'Connor, Dead.

Frank O'Connor died at Cincinnati, Ohio, last Saturday after an illness of several months. He was born in this town 35 years ago and was a son of Mrs. Julia O'Connor who survives him, together with a brother, Eugene O'Connor and three sisters, Miss Ella and Miss Mary Leonard of Boston. The remains were brought here Wednesday and the funeral was held from the church at 10 A. M. on Thursday morning. Interment was at St. Francis Xavier cemetery.

In justice to the voters of the town, and especially for the benefit of the newcomers amongst us, we take this method of informing you of the service rendered to you by since he has had the honor of representing you in the Massachusetts legislature.

Although our representative district is strongly republican, Mr. Dwyer, a democrat, easily defeated the republican opponent of two years in his first try, and has been re-elected by increased majorities since, a fact which tells plainly of the people's confidence in him.

A man now fifty years of age, he has held one or more public offices nearly every year since he became of age, and the reputation he had made as an able and exceptionally honest servant of the people gave him an easy victory when he yielded to the demands of his fellow townsmen and became a candidate for this important position.

With a record of service to our townsmen which his opponents frankly admit could not be surpassed, and with a reputation on Beacon Hill which did credit to the town of Weymouth, the effort of the political ringsters to defeat him and to elect in his stead young inexperienced lawyers who were in the employ of the Boston Elevated Railway Co., proved a dismal failure.

On each occasion our advice to elect our tried and true business man in preference to his young lawyer opponent was heeded, and when Mr. Dwyer took his seat as the representative of all the people regardless of party his very able and honest service proved the wisdom of our advice and of the people's choice.

This year Mr. Dwyer had on two occasions the honor which every representative desires and which few ever attain; an honor which is the greater when extended to a democratic member by a republican house.

VOTERS OF WEYMOUTH!

A Democratic Legislature This Year Means—

An attempt to annex Weymouth to the City of Boston even without the consent of the people of Weymouth. This is the purpose of the bill introduced last year by the democrats, and supported by Boston's Democracy, provided for annexation of towns and cities in the Metropolitan District by a majority vote of the whole district. Under such a bill, Weymouth could be annexed to Boston even though she voted against it.

The overthrow of the Boston charter and the destruction of the Boston Finance Commission. Probably, the return of the police commissioner to the appointing power of the city of Boston and the consequent return to the conditions that existed before this state removed from Boston's political influences.

Also the election of a democratic United States Senator. Also the election of a democratic speaker of the house and president of the senate. The present candidates for these positions are members of Boston's Democracy.

THE VOTERS OF WEYMOUTH! REBELLIONS OF PARTY SHOULD THIS YEAR SUPPORT—Joseph Walker for governor; Roger Wolcott for senator and William J. Holbrook for representative.

Holbrook Campaign Committee, Edward D. Lord, chairman, Ralph W. Thomas, secretary, 548 Pleasant street, South Weymouth, Mass.

Monday Club.

On Monday afternoon, November 4th, at 4 o'clock P. M., the Monday Club will present Miss Betty J. Dunaway in her musical dramatic, "The Lady of the Decoration," with Miss Helen Van Alen as accompanist.

Miss Dunaway comes to the Club, most highly recommended, her interpretation of the character of the lady, together with the music and costumes being considered extremely pleasing. She is a native of Weymouth and is in every way a native artist in her profession.

Miss Helen Van Alen, musical director, is a native of Weymouth and is a native artist in her profession. She is a native of Weymouth and is a native artist in her profession. She is a native of Weymouth and is a native artist in her profession.

This is to be an open meeting and the Club members extend an invitation to the ladies of the town to visit to their friends. Guests Tickets Twenty Five Cents.

Instantly Killed.

John Denison was instantly killed at an early hour this morning. He was leaving the Cedar Crest club in his auto and by mistake ran his machine over the bank about 30 feet high. The machine turned turtle and he was buried beneath it. He died almost instantly. He was 37 years old and was a native of Weymouth. He was a member of the Cedar Crest club and was a very kind and generous person. He was a member of the Cedar Crest club and was a very kind and generous person.

The Progressives of Weymouth held a rally in the Town Hall, East Weymouth, last evening at which there were quite a number present. Among the speakers of the occasion were Charles Sumner Bird of Walpole, Candidate for Governor; Lester P. Winchcomb of Hiale Park, Candidate for State Senator; Dr. Herbert McIntosh of Sharon, Candidate for County Treasurer; Frank A. Morrill of Norwood and Leonard Martin.

Brilliant Social Event.

One of the most pleasing and successful event of the season was an Informal Social Party given in honor of the birthday of Miss Madeline T. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hunt at Bates Opera House, last Friday evening. Guests to the number of over 200 were present from all of the Weymouths, Gloucester, Milton, Quincy, Hyde Park, Everett, Revere and other places.

The event was decidedly a social affair with dancing to music furnished by Shaw's orchestra. A delicious lunch was served and it, as well as all other features, was highly enjoyed.

High School Notes.

It is reported that $500 was netted at the Victoria concert and candy sale held last Friday evening. The football game scheduled for last Saturday between Bridgewater H. S. and Weymouth High at Bridgewater was cancelled.

Miss Ruth Bradford a graduate of this school and the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Emory L. Bradford of East Weymouth has won the distinction of obtaining the rank of highest honor in her studies at Wellesley College where she attends. Miss Bradford was a member of the Weymouth High School graduating class of 1911 and is in her second year at Wellesley College.

There are Three Big Essentials for good paint—it must penetrate the pores of the surface painted; it must be elastic; it must be waterproof. Therefore we recommend

Dutch Boy Pure White Lead
(Dutch Boy Painter Trade-Mark) and Lewis Linseed Oil in sealed cans. These reliable, old-fashioned materials, when properly mixed and applied, hang to the wood until slowly worn away. They are not affected by heat or cold and are absolutely weather-proof.

Come to us for your paint supplies and ask for our Painting Points containing color schemes and many other valuable suggestions.

Crawford Ranges

A suggestion to cooks—ask somebody who has used a Crawford range—and you will very easily find such a person—that the patented Single Damper of the Crawford means as a help in cooking. All other ranges have two—or more—dampers; hence damper mistakes.

Also, the scientific Cup-Joint curved heat flues that heat the oven in every part alike; the Ash Hod that takes the place of the clumsy ash pan; the Patented Grates; the powerful waterfronts and other time, trouble and money saving improvements peculiar to Crawford; ask about these. If you will do this we believe your next range will be a Crawford.

MODEL "30" 5-PASSENGER TOURING CAR, $1,250

The Car you have waited for

This car is built to answer the large demand for a medium priced car, having sufficient power to take a party of five anywhere. It has every good point claimed for the higher-priced cars. It is finished with the same care and attention given to all Oakland models. The upholstery is comfortable. The trimmings are of the very best material, and the body is finished with the same number of coats of paint. This model has been much admired, and its thorough examination by prospective purchasers will convincingly prove that we have not exaggerated this car by a single statement.

The same simplified design in the chassis and mechanical construction, which places the highest priced models in a distinctive class, is found in "30". In short, it is an ideal, five-passenger car of medium horsepower rating, and capable of doing the work of costlier models.

CHAPTER VIII.

Wherein Mrs. Comstock indulges in "Frills" and Billy Reappears.

It was Wesley Sinton who really wrestled with the problem as he drove about his business. He did not have to ask himself what it meant; he knew. The old Corson gang was still holding together. Elder members who had escaped the law had been joined by a younger brother of Jack's, and they met in the thickest of the few remaining fast places of the swamp to drink, gamble and loaf. Then, suddenly, there would be a robbery in some country house where a farmer that day had sold his wheat or corn and not paid a visit to the bank, or in some neighboring village.

The home of Mrs. Comstock and Elmore adjoined the swamp. Sinton's land lay next, and not another residence or man ever to reach in case of trouble. Whoever wrote that note had been human kindness in his breast, but the fact stood revealed that he feared his strength if Elmore was delivered into his hands. Where had been the previous night when he heard that prayer? Was that the first time he had been in such proximity? Sinton drove fast, for he wished to reach the swamp before Elmore and the Bird Woman would go there for more money.

At almost 4 he came to the case, and dropping on his knees studied the ground, every sense alert. He found two or three little beetle prints. Those were made by Elmore or the Bird Woman. What Sinton wanted to learn was whether all the rest were the footprints of one man. It was easily seen they were not. There were deep, even tracks made by fairly new shoes, and others where a well worn heel cut deeper on the inside of the print than at the outer edge. Undoubtedly some of Corson's old gang were watching the case and the visits of the women to it. There was no danger that anyone would attack the Bird Woman. She never went to the swamp at night, and on her trips in the daytime every one knew that she carried a revolver, and how to use it and how to pursue her work in a fearless manner.

Sinton was afraid for Elmore, yet he did not want to add the burden of fear to Katharine Comstock's trouble or to disturb the joy of Elmore in her work. He stopped at the cabin and slowly went up the walk. Mrs. Comstock was sitting on the front step with some sewing. She dropped her work on her lap, laid her hands on it and looked into his face with a sneer.

"You didn't let any grass grow under your feet," she said.

Sinton saw her white, drawn face and comprehended.

"I went to pay a debt and see about this opening of the ditch, Kate."

"You said you were going to prosecute."

"Good gracious, Kate!" cried Sinton. "Is that what you have been thinking all day? I told you before I left yesterday that I would not need to do that. I want to ask you if you ever see anything about the swamp that makes you think the old Corson gang is still alive?"

"Can't say that I do," said Mrs. Comstock. "There's kind of dancing lights there sometimes, but I supposed it was just people passing along the road with lanterns."

"Kate I have got to tell you something. Elmore stopped at the swamp this morning, and somebody had been into it in the night."

"Broke the lock?"

"No. Used a duplicate key. Today I heard there was a man here last night. I want to nose around a little."

Sinton went to the east end of the cabin and looked up at the window. There was no way any one could have reached it without a ladder, for the logs were beveled and mortar filled the cracks. Even then he went to the west end. The willow faced him as he turned the corner, and he saw the trunk carefully. There was no mistake about small particles of black swamp mud adhering to the sides of the tree. He reached the low branches and climbed the willow. There was earth on the large limb crossing Elmore's window. He stood on it, holding the branch as he had been done the night before, and looked into the room. He could see very little, but he knew that if it had been dark outside and sufficiently light for Elmore to study inside he could have seen him. He brought his face close to the netting, and he would see the bed with its head to the east, at its foot the table with the candles and the chair before it, and then he knew where the man had been who had heard Elmore's prayer.

Mrs. Comstock had followed around the corner and stood watching him. "Do you think some slinking hawk was up there peekin' in at Elmore's?" she demanded indignantly.

"There is much on the trunk and plenty on the limb," said Sinton. "Hadden't you better get a saw and let me take this branch off?"

"No, I hadn't," said Mrs. Comstock. "First place, Elmore's climbed from that window on that limb. I'll be bound it's his. Second place, no one gets ahead of me after I've had warning. Any crow that perches on that roost again will get its feathers somewhat scattered. Look along the fence there and see if you can find where he came in."

The place was easy to find as was a trail leading for some distance west of the cabin.

"You just go home and don't fret yourself," said Mrs. Comstock. "I'll take care of this. If you should hear the dinner bell at any time in the night you come down. But I wouldn't say anything to Elmore. She best keep her mind on her studies if she's going to school."

When the work was finished that night Elmore took her books and went to her room to prepare some lessons, but every few minutes she looked toward the swamp to see if there were lights near the case. Mrs. Comstock raked together the logs in the cooking stove, got out the lunch box, and sitting down, she studied it grimly. At last she arose.

"Wonder how it would do to show Mag Sinton a frill or two," she murmured.

Mrs. Comstock was up early and without a word handed Elmore the luncheon case as she left the next morning.

"Thank you, mother," said Elmore and went on her way.

She walked down the road, looking straight ahead until she came to the corner, where she usually entered the swamp. She paused, glanced that way and smiled. Then she turned and looked back. There was no one coming in any direction. She kept to the road until well around the corner, then she stopped and sat on a grassy spot, laid her books beside her and opened the lunch box. She scarcely could believe her senses. Half the bread compartment was filled with dainty sandwiches of bread and butter sprinkled with the salt of egg and the rest with three large slices of the most fragrant spice cake imaginable. The meat dish contained sliced cold ham, of which she knew the quality; the salad was lettuce and celery, and the cup held preserved pear, clear as amber. There was milk in the bottle, two tissue wrapped cucumber pickles in the fold, drinking water and fresh napkins in the ring. No lunch was ever daintier or more palatable. Of that Elmore was perfectly sure. And her mother had prepared it for her.

She played around her and then to her old refuge, the case. "She does love me," cried the happy girl. "Sure as you're born she loves me; she just hasn't found it out yet."

She was to go to the Bird Woman's after school for the last loan of the arrow points and specimens to the bank. That would exhaust her present supplies and give her enough money ahead to pay for books, tuition and clothes for at least two weeks. She would work early and late gathering nuts. In October she would sell these things. So she approached the bridge.

when Ellen insisted upon Elmore lunching at the Brownlee home and conversing with her mother and sister and overheard Elmore by a greatly magnified but moderately accurate history of her lunch box.

"See, but it's a box, daddy," cried the laughing girl. "It's carved leather and fastens with a strap that's got her name on it. Inside are trays for things all complete, and it bears evidence of having inclosed delicious food, but Elmore never gets any. She's carried it two days now, and both times it has been empty before she reached school. Isn't that killing?"

"It is, Ellen. In more ways than one. No girl is going to eat breakfast at 6 o'clock, walk three miles and do good work with no lunch. You can't tell me anything about that box. I sold it last Monday night to Wesley Sinton, one of my good country customers. He told me it was a present for a girl who was worthy of it, and I see he was right."

When Elmore entered the court room she never gets any. She's carried it two days now, and both times it has been empty before she reached school. Isn't that killing?"

"I am almost sorry I have these clothes," she said to Ellen.

"In the name of sense, why?" cried the astonished girl.

"Every one is so nice to me in them. It just sets me to wondering if in time I could have made them be equally friendly in the others."

Ellen looked at her introspectively.

"Well, yes, I believe you could. She's carried it two days now, and both times it has been empty before she reached school. Isn't that killing?"

"That night the Bird Woman made the last trip to the swamp. Every specimen she possibly could use had been procured at last. But it would have taken time and heartache, and your mind would have been less free to work on your studies. No one is happy without the things I just simply can't get when I am unhappy."

"That night the Bird Woman made the last trip to the swamp. Every specimen she possibly could use had been procured at last. But it would have taken time and heartache, and your mind would have been less free to work on your studies. No one is happy without the things I just simply can't get when I am unhappy."

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY-THREE YEARS AGO.
The Weymouth Iron Co. have partially suspended operations from lack of water to run the machinery. A portion of the works at the foundry are run by steam.

At the close of registration last Wednesday night, the number of voters this year was found to be 2288, an increase of 205 over last year.

The annual report of the treasurer of the Weymouth A. & L. Society, presented at the annual meeting held last week, is as follows:
Total receipts, 4,233.42
Preliminary and bills paid and to pay $329.72
Balance, GEO. W. BATES, treas., $893.70
We omit the detail account from the above—Ed.

George O. Preston, one of the officers of the Hyde and Leather Bank of Boston, was united in marriage last Sunday to Miss Fannie J. Wiles, well known as one of our leading vocalists, of North Weymouth. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. P. Chubb, at the residence of the bride's father, Elmer Wiles.

The Republican caucus was held on Tuesday evening at the Town Hall and informal ballot. Nathan D. Canterbury of East Weymouth, received 92; Freeman Hollis, 40. Mr. Canterbury's nomination was then made official, and on a second ballot, Louis A. Cook, South Weymouth, had 151; Freeman Hollis, 39. Messrs. Canterbury and Cook were then declared the nominees.

Last Monday evening the Independents held a caucus at the Weymouth Town Hall, Rev. J. Baker being chosen chairman and Oliver Burrell, secretary. On the ballot for candidate for representative George A. Cushing of North Weymouth, received 74; Rev. J. Baker, 40; Nat. Pearce, 25; and Mr. Cushing was declared the nominee. Weymouth is entitled to two representatives in the year and Quincy one. It will be seen that the Butler party in Weymouth have made but one nomination while the party in Quincy make two.

THE TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.
The Democratic representative caucus was held at the Town Hall, Wednesday evening called to order by the Rev. J. L. Lincoln, who read the call, after which he was chosen chairman, and Louis A. Cook, secretary. An informal ballot for representative was as follows:
Total number of votes 110
Necessary for choice, 55
Col. B. S. Lovell, 29
C. C. Tower, 81

Work on the electric road from Columbian Square to the depot will be begun about the first of the next week.

The quiet of the residents of South Weymouth has been somewhat disturbed during the week by the numerous burglaries which have been committed.

Memorial services to the late W. H. Crockett were held at the Weymouth Church Sunday afternoon, the desk from which the deceased had so often spoken, was draped in mourning, and many testimonies of regard for the deceased were given by those present.

At a special meeting of the school board held last Friday afternoon, H. H. Hadden, advanced Lessons in English was adopted for use in the ninth grades of the public schools. On the recommendation of the special committee on employing a music teacher, E. F. Sawyer was elected to that position; salary, $650 per year.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a roaring sound or imperfect hearing, and in time it entirely cures. Deafness, however, is not cured until the inflammation is taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

Bright buttercups and daisies grow Upon the highway side; And give to us a picture bright While they shall there abide.

Such scenes must fade and pass away And others take their place; But all the changes that may come Lack beauty and sweet grace.

But the buttercups and daisies That Whitcomb now provides; They're more than good to look upon They please the taste besides.

Just order some immediately For they are something new; The characters of either one Will certainly please you.

The Votes and the Result

Weymouth Was in Line With a Large Part of the Nation

The National and State election is now over and in producing the result Weymouth in the main was in line with the majority. It was an ideal day for voters to get out and to facilitate the early work the Weymouth Light & Power Co. turned on the electric lights for the benefit of those who must get out of town early. The several precincts were in working order on time and voting began at once with quite a rush, the first hour and then a settle down to steady work until the close of the polls at 6 o'clock p. m. Counting of the ballots was watched with interest and it early became apparent that the "tidal wave" had struck Weymouth, overwrought the bank and many fond expectations were beneath the waves as will be seen by the following results:

CHAPTER IX.

Wherein Mrs. Constable Manipulates Margaret, and Billy Acquires a Residence.

ELINORA hurried upstairs to change her dress. Margaret and Billy came that night, bringing a beautiful line one in its stead and carried away the other to launder.

"Do you mean to say those dresses are to be washed every two days?" questioned Mrs. Constable.

"They have to be to look fresh," replied Margaret. "We want our girl sweet as a rose."

"Well, of all things!" cried Mrs. Constable. "Every two days! Any girl who can't keep a dress clean longer than that is a dirty girl. You'll wear the goods out and fade the colors with so much washing."

"We'll have a clean girl anyway," said Mrs. Constable. "If you like the job you can have it," said Mrs. Constable. "I don't mind the washing, but I'm so inconvenient with an iron."

Elmora sat late that night working hard over her lessons. The next morning she put on her blue dress and ribbon, and in those she was a picture. Mrs. Constable caught her breath with a queer stirring around her heart and looked twice to be sure of what she saw. As Elmora hurriedly dressed her mother silently gave her the lunch box.

"Feels heavy," said Elmora glancing at the box.

"And smelly," said Elmora glancing at the box.

Elmora went down the road thinking of the children with whom she probably would divide. Of course, the bridge would be occupied again. So she hurriedly changed her dress. Undoubtedly Mrs. Constable was showing Margaret Sinton the "frills." The cake was still fresh, and there were four slices. The sandwiches had to be tasted twice before Elmora discovered that beechnuts had been used in a peanut recipe, and they were a great improvement. There were preserved strawberries in the pot, potato salad with mint and cucumber, the dish and a beautifully browned squash and the stable lot.

"I don't want to be selfish," murmured Elmora, "but just seems as if I can't give away this lunch. If mother did not put love into it she's substituted something that's likely to fool me."

She almost felt her steps lagging as she approached the bridge. A very hungry dog had been added to the trio of children. Elmora loved all dogs, and usually, this one came to her in hand. The children said "Good morning!" with alacrity, and another paper parcel lay conspicuous.

"How are you this morning?" inquired Elmora.

"All right," cried the three, while the dog sniffed ravenously at the lunch box and beat a perfect tattoo with his tail.

"How did you like the bologna?" questioned Billy eagerly.

"One of the girls took me to lunch at her home yesterday," answered Elmora.

Dawn broke beautifully over Billy's streaked face. He caught the package and thrust it toward Elmora.

"Then maybe you'd like to try the bologna today?"

The dog leaped in glad apprehension of something, and Elmora scrambled to her feet and took a step forward. The look of famished greed in her eyes was more than Elmora could bear. She opened the box and divided the milk between Billy and the girl. She gave each a piece of cold roast, for a sort of sandwich. Billy pressed forward eagerly, bitter disappointment on his face, and the older boy forgot his charge.

"Aw, I thought they'd be meat!" Elmora gave way.

"There is!" she said gladly. "There is a little piece of meat. I want just a little piece of meat, for a sort of sandwich. Billy pressed forward eagerly, bitter disappointment on his face, and the older boy forgot his charge.

Dawn broke beautifully over Billy's streaked face. He caught the package and thrust it toward Elmora.

"Then maybe you'd like to try the bologna today?"

The dog leaped in glad apprehension of something, and Elmora scrambled to her feet and took a step forward. The look of famished greed in her eyes was more than Elmora could bear. She opened the box and divided the milk between Billy and the girl. She gave each a piece of cold roast, for a sort of sandwich. Billy pressed forward eagerly, bitter disappointment on his face, and the older boy forgot his charge.

"Aw, I thought they'd be meat!" Elmora gave way.

"There is!" she said gladly. "There is a little piece of meat. I want just a little piece of meat, for a sort of sandwich. Billy pressed forward eagerly, bitter disappointment on his face, and the older boy forgot his charge.

"How did you like the bologna?" questioned Billy eagerly.

"One of the girls took me to lunch at her home yesterday," answered Elmora.

boy'll see that they have plenty."

"What will he say?"

"Your pa is in that kind of sleep now where he won't wake up, Billy," said Sinton. "It's pretty sure the law will give you to me if you want to come."

"When people don't ever wake up they're dead," announced Billy. "Is my pa dead?"

"Yes, he is," answered Sinton. "And you'll take care of Jimmy and Belle, too?"

"I can't adopt all three of you," said Sinton. "I'll take you and see that they are well provided for. Will you come?"

"Yep, I'll come," said Billy. "Let's eat that thing we do."

"All right," agreed Sinton. "Come into this restaurant." He lifted Billy to the lunch counter and ordered the milk to be brought and a biscuit. "I think there's going to be fried chicken when we get home," he said. "So you just take the edge off now and fill up later."

When you "dump" your old fire do you dump it into an ash pan? And then strew the floor and the cellar stairs with ashes when you carry it away?

Wouldn't a deep Hod—big enough to hold the ashes, easy and cleanly to carry—be better?

Crawford Ranges have the Ash Hod. It catches all of the ashes and can be emptied without spilling. Same size as the Coal Hod beside it. This feature is patented and only Crawford Ranges have it.

The Single Damper (patented) and the Oven heated in all parts alike by the scientific Cup-Joint heat flues are other Crawford trouble and money savers. Send for the illustrated pamphlet.

1913 Models of the Indian Motorcycle

Following the "14 Important Improvements" of 1912, the Indian Mfg. Co. announces to the public that they have introduced a new model of the Indian Motorcycle. By far the most significant feature of the new machine is the Cradle Spring Frame. It is something entirely new, a radical departure from the conventional bicycle and recent motorcycle systems of "springing." Briefly the new device consists of the application to the rear wheel of the Indian Cradle Spring device as used on the front fork for the past three years. Extending back horizontally from the frame joint cluster under the saddle, flanking the rear mud guard, are two leaf Chrome Vanadium steel springs. The "U" shaped curbs at the rear end of these springs are connected by stays to bell-crank levers which the rear axle is hung. The forward end of the rear fork has a huge joint which enables the rear wheel to yield to imperfections of road surface. All shocks are completely absorbed by the leaf springs. The rear wheel can go through almost any vertical motion without affecting the body of the machine. There is no "bottom" to the spring device. The life of the machine is greatly increased. The Engineering Department of the Indian Mfg. Co. devoted 18 months of exhaustive test to the Cradle Spring Frame before finally deciding on its adoption for all models of the 1913 Indian. In addition to the Cradle Spring Frame, the 1913 Indian embodies 10 other important improvements which will be appreciated by the motorcycle riders in general. Prices remain the same as last year. New style, single clinch rims; larger tires; wider mud guards front and rear with larger splashers; casing for upper stretch of transmission chain and curve of sprocket; larger luggage carrier in rear, fitted to all models; foot rests, as well as pedals, fitted to regular 4 h.p. and 7 h.p. models; foot brake lever fitted on left side now operates hand brake as well as the pedal action; larger size multiple disc clutch now fitted to all models alike; improved Indian type saddle. All 1913 Indians will be chain driven and finished in Indian red only.

The Glory of the Incomplete.

[Written for the Gazette and Transcript.]
The Benedict inserted his latch key, swung open the door and stepped back for the Bride to enter.

"Home again!" she said, with a thrill of emotion. "How good this little house is!"

The Benedict looked at her searchingly as he took her coat and waited for her to discover the hiding places of her numerous trinkets.

"Beloved, you look exactly as though you meant this," she said, with a smile. "She showed him her hair with its pins and turned to the mirror to fluff out her hair. Then, as he went down the hall to put the coats and hats away, she dodged into the den and before he could follow she had stuck a match and ignited the paper in the grate. The blaze caught the pine kindlings with a sputter and a crackle that sent out a welcome call to the Benedict, who was not slow to answer it.

They sat in silence while the flames leaped up and the clock ticked on and on. Presently it struck twelve and the Bride broke their silence.

"So you think I mean it?" she asked. "Yes," replied the Benedict, for his thoughts had been very close to hers. "From the bottom of my heart I do mean it."

"I'm very glad, Beloved. I was afraid the little shack would seem very humble after what we've seen tonight."

"Humble? That's just it, Jack; it does. That's why I love it so. I've been dazzled with splendor and suffocated in display, and through it all I've been downright homesick for this." She made a comprehensive gesture that seemed to express a card.

"Didn't it make you wish your stupid old husband could hand you out a few more coins?"

"Not once!" declared the Bride. "You're a comfortable sort of a contented little person."

"I should hope so," she smiled. "I'd be ashamed to be anything but contented. I haven't a great deal of sense, but I can see this much: that if you have something to look forward to, you can be a lot happier than if you have all your wishes gratified at once."

"There isn't a place in it where she could put another piece of furniture or bric-a-brac if she saw one she wanted to buy."

"That's not exactly our fix," laughed the Benedict. "Fortunately, no. I have some of my happiest times looking at the nice pieces I hope to buy some day and planning just where I shall place them."

"Madge and Tom have some splendid pictures; did you notice?"

"Yes, but there it is again. They had a man down from Jackson's to settle the question of pictures for the whole house and there aren't a half-dozen that really represent their taste. It's the same with their rugs."

"I'd like some of their books to read," mused the Benedict.

"Perhaps you'd like them better than I do, Jack. They're a good great lot, either of them, and I am positive that most of their books have never had the leaves cut. They stocked up with what they thought would be proper, and Madge told me herself that Jean Forrester made out the lists for her. I'd much rather make up my library as I go along and put into it only the books I have read and can vouch for."

"Then I needn't worry about a loan?" asked the Benedict, with relief. "A loan? What do you mean?"

"I was wondering if it wasn't a shame to keep you waiting so long for some of the things other people have, and I had a notion of hunting up some money to complete our furnishings."

"The Bride looked up as if he had suggested embezzlement. "Jack!" she gasped, "don't you ever do that! I should enjoy things a bit that were bought that way. Don't you understand? I don't want things finished; I just want to be finishing them, with all ways something to long for. If we had everything this house would hold I should soon be sighing for another, as Madge is."

"She is pestering the life out of Tom to build a summer cottage in the Adirondacks. A cottage! You know what it would be, just another series of show rooms like their town house."

"It is a pity Madge hasn't some of your sense," remarked the Benedict with feeling. "You should tell her your views on the subject, Beloved."

The Bride laughed at her own temerity. "You'd better believe I shall if she ever gives me a chance."

ON THE FARM

This Column Alone Cost Us More Than $200. A Year. You Can Have it a Year for $2.00 and the Rest of the Paper for Nothing.
Now is the time to cut your grapevines back to one or two buds on a stock.

Produce not marketed should be well stored and protected.

Clean, dry bedding is a prime requisite in the care of live stock. There are no exceptions to this rule.

As the end of the year approaches let us be up and doing all the outdoor work that has been put off, lest winter catch us unprepared.

Rose bushes may be protected in cold weather by hilling up with earth; or, better, by covering leaves or straw lightly over the plants, and securing them with evergreen branches. When the latter are abundant, they are in themselves sufficient.

While any kind of a soil that will produce any kind of a crop will produce strawberries, don't expect to get a very large crop of berries from very poor soil, as it won't make it. Your yield will be in proportion to the fertility of your soil, other conditions being equal.

The farmer now who grows and finishes hogs for market must feed economically to make money on the animals. Forage crops, supplementary concentrates and a little corn are the best combination of feeds for growing hogs economically. Corn has been the universal feed for finishing swine. Of late years, however, some other feeds are being used in connection with corn for the finishing period. Among these are wheat, rye, barley, shorts, tankage and linseed oil meal.

One of the oldest of all breeds of fowls known to history is the Dorking. The original of the Dorking is thought to have been brought into England by the Romans and in England it has reached its highest state of perfection. It has not been extensively bred in America until of late years. They lay large white eggs and the chicks, under favorable conditions, make rapid growth. The fowls are docile and readily confined, a moderate-sized fence being sufficient to keep them in their yard.

We imagine that warm feed tastes just as much better to a sow than cold feed on a cold day as a hot dinner tastes better to man than does a cold lunch. However that may be, we do know from observation that either a sow or a pig will eat much more and is greatly stimulated by getting a little warm feed into its body. Straightway it will become active and begin to hustle about, whereas a sow or a pig that is given cold feed will eat a little of it very indifferently and then crawl right back into its nest again to get warm.

Orchards may be trimmed now or any time during the winter that may be convenient. When dead limbs are cut off the struts should be cut close to the body of the tree, and the wound painted over with linseed oil and iron paint to exclude the wet, which would rot the wood and cause the tree to decay. An axe should never be used in pruning; a sharp, fine-toothed saw, with plenty of set to the teeth, is the best instrument for this work. Small limbs should be cut close to the bark of the branches to avoid sprouts growing from the stubs. The rubbish should be removed and burned with all the eggs of insects which are apt to be upon it.

MASSACHUSETTS CROP REPORT.

The final Massachusetts Crop Report for the season of 1912, for the month of October, has just been issued by the State Board of Agriculture. This is of special interest in that weather and crop conditions for the entire season are summarized, full returns for the crops of the year have been received and are summed up, and the conditions of water supply and fall sown crops are discussed in detail. Prices and profits for the season are also fully taken up and conclusions drawn from the information received. The bulletin is extra large this month and contains a very valuable article upon barn construction by Prof. J. A. Ford, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, entitled "Some Suggestions on Barn Building." This is illustrated with photographs and plans for barns. A copy of this report may be secured by applying to J. Lewis Ellsworth, Secretary, State Board of Agriculture, 136 State House, Boston, Mass. All applicants may have their names placed on the permanent mailing list for these reports if so desired. The next issue of the report will be for the month of May, 1913.

Lions as Watchdogs.

A Rhode Island farmer is reported to have trained two African lions to protect his premises. They act as night patrols, and are keenly on the alert to every sound. For a considerable time he had employed dogs, but they were invariably poisoned. He tried the experiment with lions as the result of his knowledge that the "king of the forest" will not touch poisoned food.—London Globe.

Threats.

I consider it a mark of great prudence in a man to abstain from threats or any contemptuous expressions, for neither of these weakens the enemy, but threats make him more cautious and the other excites his hatred and a desire to revenge himself.—Machiavelli.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedy. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

Gas Cooking Means Prompt Meals

It is hard to smile while you are kept waiting for breakfast. It is still harder to smile while chopping kindling and building the fire. Gas cooking means prompt meals. No good reason exists why you should not enjoy the conveniences of gas in winter as well as during the other seasons. Domestic cheerfulness is a wonderful tonic. Send a man away from home happy and you have done a lot toward helping him along the road to success. Did you ever know a vigorous, healthy man who liked to be kept waiting for his breakfast? Produce him—and he is entitled to the homage of all womankind. He is a paragon without a peer. But, Madam, as the world exists today, is it not best to have that breakfast ready ON TIME? Breakfast on time is easy if you have a gas range and use it. Confer with our Business Dept. for further particulars. Evening appointments made to suit your convenience. A phone call or a post card will bring our representative. We will have a window demonstration on Saturday afternoon and evening at Rockland.

CHAPTER X

Wherein Billy Creates a Sensation in the Sinton Home.

W HILE Billy looked Sinton called up the different department authorities, ending with the Women's Relief association. He sent a basket of food to Belle and Jimmy, bought Billy a pair of trousers and a shirt and went to living Elora.

"Why, Uncle Wesley?" cried the girl. "Were did you find Billy?"

"I've adopted him for the time being. If not longer," replied Sinton.

"Where did you get him?" queried the astonished Elora.

"Well, you-gone woman," said Sinton. "Mr. Brownie told me the history of your lunch box. It didn't seem so funny to me as it does to the rest of them, so I went to look up the father of Billy's family and make him take care of them or allow the law to do it for him. It will have to be the law."

"He's deader than anything," broke in Elora. "He can't ever take all the meat any more."

"Billy?" gasped Elora. "A child don't say such things about a father who loved and raised him right. When it happens the father alone is to blame. You won't hear Billy talk like that about me when I cross over."

"You must hear Billy when you are going to take him to keep."

"I'll soon need help," said Sinton. "Billy will come in just about right ten years from now, and if I raise him I'll have him the way I want him."

"But Aunt Margaret don't like boys," objected Elora. "She won't want him in her home."

"In our home," corrected Sinton. "What makes you want him?" marveled Elora.

"God only knows," said Sinton. "Billy ain't so beautiful, and he ain't so smart. I guess he's because he's a human. My heart goes out to him."

"So did mine," said Elora. "I love him. I'd rather see him eat my lunch than have it myself any time."

"What makes you like him?" asked Sinton.

"Why, I don't know," pondered Elora. "He's so little, he needs so much, he's got such splendid grip, and he's perfectly unselfish with his brother and sister. But we must wash him before Aunt Margaret sees him. I wonder if mother—"

"You needn't bother. I'm going to take him home the way he is," said Sinton. "I want Maggie to see the worst of it."

"I'm afraid," began Elora.

"So am I," said Sinton. "But I won't give him up. I've taken a sort of grip on my heart. I've always been crazy for a boy. Don't let him hear us."

"Don't let him hear us," cried Elora. "During their talk Billy had wandered to the edge of the walk and barely escaped the wheels of a passing automobile in an effort to catch a stray kitten he seemed to dance."

Sinton drew Billy back to the walk and held his hand closely. When they started home Billy sat on the front seat. He drove with the hitching strap tied to the railing of the dashboard, flourished the whip and yelled with delight. At first Sinton laughed with him, but by the time he had known the several packages at his gate he was looking serious enough.

Margaret was at the door as they drove up the lane. Sinton left Billy in the carriage, hitched the horse and went to explain to her. He had not reached her before she cried, "Look, Wesley, that child! You'll have a run-ner!"

Wesley looked and ran. Billy was standing in the carriage clashing the mettlesome horses with the whip.

"See me make 'em go!" he shouted as the whip fell a second time.

"See me make 'em go!" he shouted as the whip fell a second time.

tens were clanking each other to death, and the air was white with fur. The string had twisted, and the frightened creatures could not recognize friends. Margaret stopped back with bleeding hands. Sinton cut the cord with his knife, and the poor little rats raced under the house bleeding and disgraced. Margaret, white with wrath, faced Sinton.

"If you don't hitch up and take that animal back to town," she said, "I will."

"He threw himself on the grass and began to scream."

"You said I could have fried chicken for supper," he wailed. "You said she was a new lady."

Sinton, after him, and something in his manner of handling the child infuriated Margaret. His touch was so gentle! She reached for Billy and gripped his shirt collar in the back. Sinton's hand closed over hers.

"Gently, girl!" he said. "This little body is covered with sores."

"Sore?" she ejaculated. "Sore? What kind of sores?"

"Oh, they might be from bruises made by fists or boot toes, or they might be bad blood from wrong eating. You hand me some towels!"

"No, I won't," said Margaret. "Well, give me some rags, then."

Margaret compromised on pieces of tablecloth.

Sinton led Billy to the cistern, pumped cold water into the tub, poured in a kettle of hot and, beginning at the head, scoured him with the towel, then teeth and said never mind, though he twisted occasionally when the soap struck a raw spot. Margaret watched the process from the window and amazed and ever increased by pulling a rope tied around a tree. The very energy with which he went to the work of swinging himself appealed to Wesley.

"Yes," he said. "He's an active little body!" he said. "There isn't a lazy bone in him. See how he works to pay for his fun."

"There goes his foot through it!" cried Margaret. "Wesley, he shall not ruin my hammock."

"Of course he shall!" said Wesley. "Wait, Billy, let me show you."

1913 Models of the Indian Motorcycle

Following the "54 Important Improvements" of 1912, the Indian Motorcycle Company announces to you a new and improved model of the Indian Motorcycle.

By far the most significant feature of the new machine is the Cradle Spring Frame. It is something entirely new, a radical departure from the conventional bicycle and recent motorcycle systems of "springs". Briefly the new device consists of the application to the rear wheel of the Indian Cradle Spring device as used on the front fork for the past three years.

Extending back horizontally from the frame joint under the saddle, flanking the rear mud guard, are two "leaf" shaped cradles at the rear end of which springs are connected by stays to bell-crank on which the rear axle is hung. The forward end of the rear fork has a hinge joint which enables the rear wheel to yield to imperfections of road surface. All shocks are completely absorbed by the leaf springs. The rear wheel can go through almost any vertical motion without affecting the body of the machine.

There is no "bottom" to the spring device. The life of the machine is greatly increased. The Engineering Department of The Indian Motorcycle Co. devoted 18 months of exhaustive test to the Cradle Spring Frame before finally deciding on its adoption for all models of the 1913 Indian.

In addition to the Cradle Spring Frame, the 1913 Indian embodies 10 other important improvements which will be appreciated by the motorcycle rider in general. Prices remain the same as last year.

New style, single clutch rim; larger tires, wider mud guards; front and rear with larger spokes; casing for upper stretch of transmission chain and curve of sprocket; larger luggage carrier in rear; fitted to all models; foot rests as well as pedals, fitted to regular 4 1/2 and 7 1/2 models; foot brake lever fitted on left side now operates hand brake as well as the pedal action; larger size multiple disc clutch now fitted to all models alike; improved Indian type saddle.

All 1913 Indians will be chain driven and finished in Indian red only.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY-SIX YEARS AGO.

The Weymouth Iron Company, having an abundant supply of water, started to mill on Mill Factory Monday, and the men have a prospect of steady work for winter.

The hen thieves are again on the war-path. One night last week two parties on East street had their hen roosts robbed, and one person at Lovell's Corner lost some valuable fowls.

Rev. J. A. Cruzan will preach Sunday morning at the Congregational church, East Weymouth, a "Sermon to Fair-weather Worshippers," and in the afternoon on "Muzzling the Mouth."

Andrew Lovell (1) settled in Weymouth 1635; probably came in same ship with Zechary Bicknell, Wm. Reed, John Whitmarsh, Henry Kingman, Thomas Holbrook and Richard Porter, with their minister, Rev. Joseph Hull, who was what would now be called an Episcopalian.

Dea George Graves, formerly of Weymouth, died at the residence of his son-in-law, Charles Richards, of Quincy, last week, at the age of 81 years, 3 months. Dea Graves was born in Lincolnshire, England, Aug. 4, 1795, and embarked for America at the age of 18, residing in Boston for a time, and also in New York, and Maine, from whence he removed to Weymouth.

The annual meeting of the Mutual Library Association was held last Friday evening at the Torrey Street school house. The following officers were elected: President, Geo. A. Morse; sec'y., George C. Torrey; treasurer, Joseph L. Dyer; librarian, Alfred H. Wright; directors, George A. Morse, L. A. Cook, W. H. Shaw, H. H. Joy, H. Dyer, E. F. Shaw, Augustus Vining. The treasurer's report showed the amount on hand at the commencement of the year to be $20.41; receipts, $135.71; total, $156.12; expenses, $135.72, leaving a balance of $20.40.

At a joint meeting of the selectmen and school committee, Rev. Julian S. Wade was elected to fill the vacancy on that committee caused by the resignation of Oliver B. Bates.

M. C. Dyer & Co. this year as for several years past, gave every married couple a Thanksgiving turkey. In order to do this, it took a total weight of about two tons.

"Advertising is to business," says Macaulay, "what steam is to machinery, the grand propelling power." And the way to advertise is to get your announcements printed in your home paper.

Christopher S. Bass, who voted the straight Democratic ticket in precinct 5, was probably one of the oldest citizens who went to the polls. Mr. Bass is 85 years of age and is quite smart for one of his years.

The residence of Josiah Martin, on Park avenue, was on Tuesday evening the scene of a pretty home wedding. The contracting parties being Miss Clara F. Martin, daughter of the host, and Mr. Josiah B. Reed, junior member of the firm of Geo. Reed & Son, shoe manufacturers on Main street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. H. Bolster of the Union Cong'l church, and was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends.

The removal of Rev. J. E. Millerick from East Weymouth, to assume the pastorate of the Catholic parish of Wakefield, has caused universal regret among his late parishioners. During his five years' connection with the parish of East Weymouth Father Millerick had become endeared to his parishioners by energetic devotion to religious duties, and the execution of many valuable improvements in the church and its surroundings.

TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO.

The lecture room of the Union church was packed to its utmost capacity standing room included, at the opening and dedicatory exercises of the People's Institute and Gymnasium of Weymouth and East Braintree on Wednesday evening last.

The regular monthly meeting of the Executive Committee of the South Weymouth Improvement Association was held last Friday evening in the W. C. T. U. rooms. The treasurer reported between two and three hundred dollars on hands.

Only a few brief days and there will be

1913 Models of the Indian Motorcycle

Following the "14 Important Improvements" of 1912, the Hendon Mfg. Co. announce no less than a dozen additional new features in their 1913 model of the Indian Motorcycle.

By far the most significant feature of the new machine is the Cradle Spring Frame. It is something entirely new, a radical departure from the conventional bicycle and recent motorcycle systems of "springing." Briefly the new device consists of the application to the rear wheel of the Indian Cradle Spring device as used on the front fork for the past three years.

Extending back horizontally from the frame joint under the saddle, flanking the rear mud guard, are two 7-leaf "Chrome Vanadium" steel springs. The "C" shaped curls at the rear end of these springs are connected by stays to bell-crank levers on which the rear axle is hung. The forward end of the rear fork has a hinge joint which enables the rear wheel to yield to imperfections of road surface. All shocks are completely absorbed by the leaf springs. The rear wheel can go through almost any vertical motion without affecting the body of the machine.

There is no "bottom" to the spring device. The life of the machine is greatly increased.

The Engineering Department of The Hendon Mfg. Co. devoted 18 months of exhaustive test to the Cradle Spring Frame before finally deciding on its adoption for all models of the 1913 Indian.

In addition to the Cradle Spring Frame, the 1913 Indian embodies 10 other important improvements which will be appreciated by the motorcycle riders in general. These remain the same as last year:

New style, single clutch rims; larger tires; wider mud guards front and rear with larger splasher; casing for upper stretch of transmission chain and curve of sprocket; larger luggage carrier in rear, fitted to all models; foot rests, as well as pedals, fitted to regulate 4 h.p. and 7 h.p. models; foot brake lever fitted on left side now operates band brake as well as the pedal action; larger size multiple disc clutch now fitted to all models alike; improved Indian type saddle.

All 1913 Indians will be chain driven and finished in Indian red only.

The Letters We Get.

(Written for the Gazette and Transcript.)

The Bride and the Benedict returned from their Thanksgiving visit to find an accumulation of mail on the hall floor under the letter slot. They gathered it up and deposited it on the table in the den and settled themselves to enjoy it.

"This Benedict in his methodical way, separated the letters from the papers and her letters from his. Then, one by one he slipped his paper cutter under the flap and passed the opened envelope across to the Bride.

"What are you waiting for?" he asked when, passing the last one over, he observed that she was laying them down unread.

"I want to see them all before I open any," she told him.

"Why? What odds does it make?"

"I like to read them in the order of their interest, beginning at the least."

"But how can you tell before you open them which is the least, or the most?"

"From past experience, of course," she declared, packing her seven letters up in the order that pleased her. "Perhaps you would like to have me prove to you that I know."

Certainly, the Benedict would. "Well, then, I will foretell what is in these letters, then I will read them aloud, and you shall see for yourself."

She took out the bottom letter.

"This letter of mother's shall be last because it is best. Mother always writes in good letters, but this time it will be better than usual because she has been to visit Blanche and there will be pages about the baby. I'm saving it just as you save the frosting on your cake."

The Benedict nodded. "That's safe enough; but the others. What's in them?"

"The first one, combined with the letter from Bert. He's having some interesting experiences in his electrical work and he has a fine knack of telling about them. It has surprised me somewhat, for Bert isn't a very good taker."

"He's all right if you can wait for him," the Benedict declared. "When you get the letter, it's all there before you, and you can read it as fast as you like."

"Perhaps that is the difference," agreed the Bride. "Now here is one from Esther Cotter. I went home with her once for an Easter recess and met some of her friends. I haven't seen her since graduation, but this letter will be full of news."

Just the people I met, and there will be allusions to our campus days that will be like a whiff of sea air to an old sailor living inland."

She laid the three letters aside and unrolled the fourth one.

"This one I have kept in the middle, because I don't quite know," she confessed. "Sometimes Ruth's letters are good, sometimes not very. I see by the postmark that she is in Vienna and I suppose there will be something about the opera; but I am sure of this much, it will be all superlatives: the grandest; the most wonderful; the most superb, most thrilling. That is Ruth's way."

"The next one is from Frances Page. It will mention some of her social engagements, and, unless I am much mistaken, it will contain the menu of what she served at her last luncheon. I seldom get a letter from Frances without a menu."

"This one is from Beth Morris. She writes about twice a year, and when I have finished reading it I shall know no more about her than I do now. She will spin a great yarn about what the Van Hortons are doing this winter, and what plays are on at the theatre; but whether she goes to the plays or figures in the Van Hortons' society she never says. I never feel that she is quite frank."

"This top one is addressed in a hand that I don't know, so it is probably curiosity that prompts me to open it first," she said as she drew out an engraved card. "Yes, as I thought. It announces the engagement of a girl I knew but slightly at college."

"Now prove your opinion of the rest of these," demanded the Benedict, "and remember I'm to be judge."

So she read him all the letters and he had to admit she was right.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY-THREE YEARS AGO.

Frank Cowing, station agent at Weymouth, returned yesterday from a visit to Yarmouth, N. S., having been absent about three weeks.

There are times when men hold up their heads and shake a few coppers for a turkey, notwithstanding they have conscientious scruples in taking a number in a chance book at a fair.

The Congregational and Methodist churches of East Weymouth, held a union service in the latter church. Rev. Mr. Eldredge preached the sermon from Eccl. vii, 10: "Say not thou what is the cause that the former days were better than these."

At South Weymouth the two Congregational churches assembled in the Union church and Rev. G. N. Marden preached the sermon from the text, "Say not thou that the former days were better than these, for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this."

There has not been a time for many months when business has appeared to be so lively as our harvest, as at the present period. The lumber dealers are selling more lumber, and have abundant orders, the highway below the depot being at times fairly blocked with teams engaged in hauling lumber, grain and coal.

The Pilgrim church assembled with the Old North church, last Thursday, and listened to a discourse by Rev. F. P. Chapin from Matt. 4, 6 and 7. "With thanksgiving let your request be made known unto God, and the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus."

Sunday morning broke cold and dreary, with a dizzling rain, ominous of snow and winter; yet the extreme inclemence of the weather did not prevent a large concourse of people from attending the dedicatory services in the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Long before the time appointed time for the services to commence every available seat in the large auditorium was filled, every religious denomination in the village being represented.

The dedicatory services commenced precisely at 10 o'clock, and were performed by Archbishop John J. Williams of Boston, assisted by Rev. James McNece of Cambridge, and Rev. N. G. Barretta of Weymouth, as deacon and subdeacon, respectively.

Twenty-five years ago.

The ladies connected with Crescent Lodge T.O.O.F., contemplate forming a Hebrew lodge and invite those interested to meet at the opera house, Friday, Dec. 6th at 7.30 p. m.

The Co-operative bank holds its regular meeting next Monday evening. About $3000 to sell to the James bidder. A good chance for some one to procure a home or pay off the old mortgage.

The meeting of the Shakespeare club will be held in the Library room of the Post building next Monday evening instead of Tuesday evening as at first announced. "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will be read.

The Hawthorne club, a social organization of young men in this village, will hold a series of assemblies at Odd Fellows hall this winter if sufficient interest is manifested in the project to warrant it. The first one was held last Wednesday evening.

There was a very pleasant gathering at 5 Vine street last Saturday evening, it being the twentieth birthday of Miss Bessie A. Mann. Friends took the occasion to give her a surprise party, thirty responding. Various games were indulged in, and a collation was served.

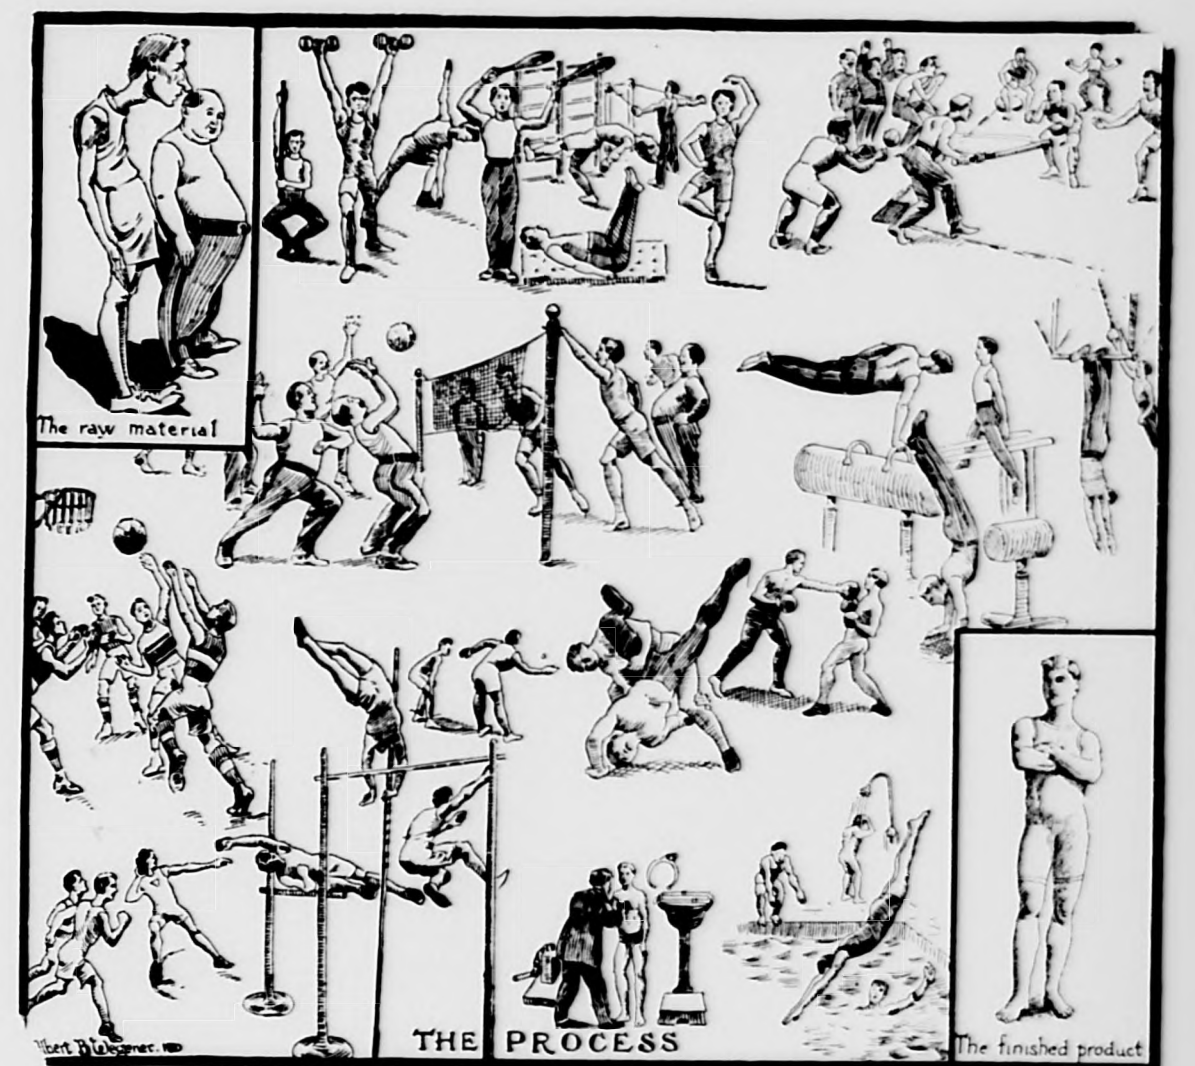

It is more blessed to give than to receive. The above was well illustrated by Walter Dizer as he stood surrounded by a ton or more of nice Vermont turkeys which he was weighing and marking for the several employees of M. C. Dizer & Co., preliminary to the carrying out of a time honored custom of this firm.

A brilliant wedding took place at the Church of the Sacred Heart Tuesday morning, when Mr. Patrick Corridan and Miss Carrie Ahern were united in marriage at a Nuptial High Mass. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. Mar.

"We eat" the squirrels are laying up for winter stores. We shouted, "Come on, Uncle Wally, let's go!" and off we have any nuts we should be fix 'em now. But I'm ahead, 'cos Uncle Wally made me this board, and I can haul 'em off faster than he can. I can get out only one at a time with my teeth."

Elmora picked him up and kissed him. "There, are you happy?" she asked.

"Yes," said Elmora, and then said, "You ought to see him make the dirt fly when he gets after a chipmunk."

"What about Wanda and the other kids?" asked Elmora. "I'll get 'em a nut when he's a walnut too big to be a chipmunk."
